apmm @ Google | Aube
London Area, United Kingdom

Summary

I work as an Associate Product Marketing Manager at Google on the Chrome browser team. In my free time I am also building Aube, a platform that analyses marketing campaigns for cultural appropriation, tokenism, stereotypes, and visual authenticity etc, across 90+ markets. I did my undergrad at ESCP and my postgrad at Imperial. I like learning about AI and building cool stuff.

Aube is an AI-powered cultural intelligence platform that helps brands and agencies analyse campaigns for cultural sensitivity, appropriation, and resonance across global markets.

I designed and built the product architecture, AI analysis frameworks, and cultural sensitivity databases from scratch. I also developed our go-to-market strategy, including competitive positioning, tiered B2B pricing, and NGO partnership programmes.

The goal: make cultural intelligence accessible to any marketing team.
